BRIGHT IDEAS FOR BETTER LIVING™

LivingTime Software Captures Life's Events
Creates "Memory Panorama" of Your Past

Redwood City, Calif., June 2, 2007 — Lifescope Inc. has released version 2.5 of LivingTime®, a software program for recording and charting the events of a person's life. Available for both Windows and Macintosh, LivingTime is combination of diary, logbook, calendar, photo album, and graphical timeliner. The program enables a person to collect and review the significant events that have happened in their life, or the life of a parent or child. In addition to composing an individual's life history, the program provides access to thousands of world events that can be imported, to provide additional richness and perspective to the act of remembering one's experiences.

According to LivingTime user Paige Adams, "Memories are elusive. When I can't recall certain details, like where I was on a specific birthday, I feel as if part of my life has been lost. I believe the single greatest benefit [of LivingTime] is having this information at my fingertips. Once recorded, I never again have to struggle to recall the times of my life. My memories aren't lost. LivingTime is, quite literally, a life preserver."

LivingTime sells for $19.95, and a free trial may be downloaded from the product website at http://www.livingtime.com. Lifescope Inc. is a publisher and purveyor of tools & resources that enhance the experience of modern living, and has been in business since 1995.
